Daniel McPherson – Learner Case Study

Success Story:
Daniel McPherson

Daniel started his career with HHR Medical in June 2016. Since then, Daniel has made significant impact in his role.

Daniel says, “I decided to choose an apprenticeship as I prefer to do practical work. I am mostly a visual learner, plus it suited me financially to earn while I learn.

Since starting my apprenticeship, I have become more time-efficient as my role requires me to manage tasks in order of priority.

I am contributing to the organisation by building a rapport with the patients, this allows for a more relaxed atmosphere which will benefit both patients and staff. Also, as I possess some IT skills I can aid the staff in technical areas.

Through my apprenticeship, I have been keen to get involved in work that involves interacting with, and bettering, the community.

Apprenticeships are an aid to maturing you into the world of work and the knowledge I have gained from my experience has been invaluable.”

“Both the staff and the apprentice are getting immense benefits from the apprenticeship scheme. Our young apprentice has come into the ‘surgery’ with a fresh look and enthusiasm.”

Bernadette Johnson, Practice Manager.
